Abstract: The opera is one of the traditional Chinese art and is unique in the history of world drama. It has a long history and a profound mass base, and is an important carrier for expressing and inheriting the fine traditional Chinese culture. This paper attempts to explore how to use the characteristics of micro-era communication to make more extensive dissemination and development of opera art by using the latest mobile new media communication methods.

1. Introduction

Chinese opera and Greek tragedy and comedy, Indian scriptures and the world's three ancient drama cultures, compared to the other two ancient drama cultures, Chinese operas are produced later, but the first two ancient drama cultures have been long The history of the river has disappeared one after another, and it no longer exists. However, although Chinese opera has experienced thousands of years of enthusiasm and rise and fall, it is still full of vitality and vitality. It is not only a treasure of the excellent traditional culture of the Chinese nation, but also plays an important role in the treasure house of world culture and art. Historically, traditional Chinese opera has continued to be passed on by word of mouth. Although in the hundreds of years, the channels of the drama are very simple and difficult, but it does not affect the people's love for the opera. “In the history of Chinese culture and art, there is no such art form that has such a large acceptance of opera. There is no such art form that has such a wide range of folk, mass and popular.”

In July 2015, the General Office of the State Council issued the “Several Policies on Supporting the Development of Traditional Chinese Opera”, proposing: “To play an important role in the development of the Internet in the development of opera, and to encourage the popularization and promotion of drama through new media.” January 25, 2017 On the day of the “Opinions on the Implementation of the Integrity and Development of Chinese Excellent Traditional Culture” issued by the General Office of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and the General Office of the State Council, it was proposed: “Intensify publicity and education. Comprehensive use of newspapers, books, radio, television, and cultural relics.” Innovative expressions, highlighting the charm of Chinese culture. Implementing the New Media Communication Project of Chinese Culture.” This series of resolutions escorts the spread of opera from the policy level. Many provinces and cities have also introduced corresponding landing policies. For example, the Hengyang Municipal People's Government in China has also issued opinions on supporting the development of the inheritance of the opera. The Hengzheng issued the [2016] 41 document, trying to form a set from top to bottom and from the central to the local. A complete system guides the drama out of the predicament and seeks new development opportunities.

The network has brought new ways of communication and communication to the opera. Traditional opera has made many efforts and attempts in using the network to expand the scope of information dissemination. With the rise of the Internet, the expression of drama has become more diverse, and various vertical platforms and social software such as Weibo, WeChat public number, and short video have been emerging. Under the impact of popular culture, especially foreign hip-hop culture, opera culture faces a dilemma. Everyone knows that opera is not only a stage art, but also a code for interpreting regional culture. It is like a dialect and a local cuisine. It is a region. Even a representative of a city. Hearing the “two-person turn”, such as the unique regional culture of the Northeast; “Great Wall” and “Tiananmen” symbolize the cultural heritage of Beijing; “Meat Sandwich” tells the history and culture of Shaanxi. Undoubtedly, the opera is a microcosm of regional culture and even Chinese culture. The gracefulness of Beijing opera, the impassion of Henan opera, and the romantic beauty of Kunqu Opera can these be passed down?

Faced with the current situation between art and the public, what can we do for art in the wechat-era?

The short video that is popular among young people in the world can provide a new communication model and promotion platform for promoting the national quintessence and inheriting the opera culture.

In the short video like Douyin are compressed for three or five hours to a few minutes, which is exactly the fast-paced life of today's era. In order to cater to the tastes of the audience, it is also possible to transform traditional operas, because the opera is a combination of singing, reading, doing and playing, including dialogue, music, singing, dance, martial arts and acrobatics. Therefore, people try to fragment it into an artistic style with opera elements and carry out cross-border cooperation and communication. This is most common in the music world, with a combination of drama and jazz, drama and pop music, opera and original music.
